REVIEW SUMMARY

GIST OF THE INVENTION

Summarize within a few lines what the major thrust of the invention is (e.g., a software program to be added to voice networks, such as Meridian, which will allow instantaneous translations from French to English).

The invention would use an application in a Wireless Internet client that automatically generates queries containing positional information, or tapping into network based positional information, to interact with commercial systems, such as parking, to monitor, reserve, and bill for the commercial services (i.e., parking). Options could include a reservation token system, as well as voice interaction. Specific customization could include a wireless internet enabled parking meter.

BENEFIT FROM THE INVENTION

Summarize within a few lines how the invention will benefit its target benefactor (e.g., subscribers able to retrieve multi-lingual messages without use of additional time consuming translation processes).

The invention would allow consumers to locate commercial services, such as parking, easily and quickly. It would be especially useful for travelers or others not familiar with a geographical area. The invention offers service providers another source of potential revenues and opens the door for more wireless internet services.
